Zinola Liquor To Be Dumped Court Orders

Liquor Seized at Fire Not To Be Returned To Owner

An application by District Attorney Franklin Swart for an order to destroy liquor, seized by the Redwood City police at the time of the fire in the home of Charles Zinola, was granted this week by Judge George H. Buck. The granting of the petition to destroy the liquor ends the suit of Zinola to have the liquor restored to him.

On February 19, while firemen were fighting the fire on the Zinola residence on Diller street, Officer Sylvester Douglass of the Redwood City police department noticed the liquor stored in the basement of the house. He confiscated the liquor and had it removed to the warehouse of the Poole Drayage Company for storage.

Zinola was arrested on a charge of illegal possession of liquor, and was later tried for the offense in the court of Police Judge Edward I. McAuliffe. Zinola demanded a jury trial, and following the hearing of the evidence, the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

Following his acquittal on the illegal possession charge, Zinola filed suit against the Poole Drayage Company for the return of the liquor stored in the warehouse. At that time District Attorney Swart filed an aplication for an order of the court to destroy the liquor. It was this order that Judge Buck issued this week.

The liquor confiscated consisted of three 200-gallon barrels of wine, fifteen 50-gallon barrels of wine, two 25-gallon barrels of wine, three 10-gallon barrels of whiskey, one 25-gallon barrel of whiskey, one 5-gallon barrel of whiskey, one 1-gallon barrel of whiskey and an assortment of liquors in jugs. The police estimated the value of the lot at more than $2000 at current prices.

Mother's Day

The following tribute to mother was recently paid by Frank E. Herring of South Bend, Indiana, past grand president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in an address delivered at a dinner given in his honor in South Bend for his services in connection with the founding of "Mother's Day" in the United States:

"To pay tribute to motherhood is to recognize the most unselfish emotion of which the human soul is capable.

"Mothers have always been the source of inspiration to men. They are the torch bearers. No race has ever risen above the ideals of its mothers. No race ever will do so.

"When one contemplates the extra-ordinary influence of Mother's Day, does it not seem strange that in all the history of the world, no nation until ours, has ever united, as a nation, to honor the universal experience of motherhood? Many high offerings to mother-love have been made in the past by individuals; immortal pictures have been painted, divine music composed, and tender poems indited, but never until our day has a nation united to testify to the greatness of all mothers.

"And among American mothers, those are exalted that have given of their flesh to defend the flag. When duty calls her son to war, she bids him goodby with dry eyes, although her heart is filled with tears. She maintains a firm and hopeful mien, that he may gain sublimer courage from her sublime example.

"When he sleeps upon the shot-torn field, her spirit keeps watch. Whilst he is slumbering, she prays. In the agony of waiting, she dies a thousand deaths, but chokes back her sobs and hides her torture. If he falls she coffins her heart in the beloved body, and her soul keeps the eternal vigil of a deathless love."

Decision Made On Beresford Tax Question

D. A. Claims District Liable for Junior College Tax

When residents of a small portion of Beresford, which was recently annexed to San Mateo, pay their taxes next year they will pay about 55½ cents more on each hundred dollars. This is the result of a decision given by District Attorney Franklin Swart as the result of an opinion by Attorney General U. S. Webb.

attention of District Attorney Swart by Auditor Edward Stack, who, desiring to arrange the school funds, asked for a statement by the district attorney as to whether the territory annexed, a part of the Sequoia high school district and of the Belmont grammar school district, became through the anexation a part of the San Mateo high schol district, the San Mateo high school district, the and of the San Mateo junior college district.

District Attorney Swart asked for an opinion on the matter from Attorney General U. S. Webb.

The matter is of interest to those involved as it means a change in their tax rate. If it were ruled that the property becomes a part of the San Mateo high school and grammar school districts, the change would be a saving of 37 cents per hundred dollar valuation to the

The matter was brought to the property owners of the territory. But, if it were ruled that the territory also becomes a portion of the San Mateo junior college district, it will result in an increase of 4 cents over the rate which they have been paying to the Sequoia high school and Belmont grammar school districts.

In the opinion received from Webb no reference is made to the district assuming the debts of the junior college district, but as it must take over the liabilities of the high school district, District Attorney Swart holds that it must also assume the liabilities of the junior college.

Fishing Boat To Be Brought Here for Court

Anderson's Boat To Be Introduced As Evidence

Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Neri and Police Officer Snider of the Redwood City police, will go to San Francisco today, if the weather will permit the safe navigation of a boat, and will bring the Ruth Rowland to Redwood City.

The boat is the one used by Anton Anderson, and on which Game Warden Allen Curry of San Francisco, and former Game Warden Jack Burke of Daly City were shot. As the shooting took place on the bay a short distance off Burlingame, and therefore in this county, Anderson will be tried in the court here.

District Attorney Swart has asked that the Ruth Rowland and also the small boat with which the two officers boarded her be brought to this city as evidence. Both boats have been tied up since the shooting at Meiggs wharf in San Francisco, where Anderson, himself almost dead with four bullet wounds, moored her with the bodies of Burke and Curry aboard.

The two game wardens were killed in a battle aboard the Ruth Rowland which started, according to Anderson, when they boarded his boat and demanded that he turn over his catch and a new net for which he had just paid $500. Anderson claims that the men accused him of fishing illegally. A fight ensued in which Anderson was shot four times, twice in the lungs.

Anderson's condition was thought at first to be critical, but it is now believed that he will recover from his wounds. When he recovers he will have to stand trial in this county for the murder of the two men.

Hence the long air journey at State expense.

Th's was disclosed in a statistical study of educational revenues made public by Vierling Kersey, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Kersey also filed a report with Governor Young showing the various sources of the "school dollar" as follows: Every cent spent on kindergartens is provided by the school districts. Of the elementary school dollar, 55.6 cents come from the district, 24.3 cents from the county, 19.9 cents from the State and .2 of a cent from the Federal government. The Federal government furnishes the same amount for high schools. The State provides 7.2 cents of every dollar expended on high schools; the county, 15.6 cents; the district, 77 cents.

California's municipal, county and state governments made expenditures totaling $725,250,201 during the last year, an increase of $33,982,101 over disbursements of the previous year, it was announced by State Controller Ray L. Riley. Municipal payments aggregated $236,968,671; county, $343,292,761, and state, $144,988,768. Highways constituted the largest single item of municipal expenditures, being 17 per cent of the total. Schools, the largest item of county payments, were 37 per cent of the total. Controller Riley also reported that the 1929 bonded debt of municipalities, counties and state totaled $781,407,305, an increase of $25,088,709 over the previous year. Bonded debts of California municipalities were $360,252,849 counties, $299,977,956; state, $121,176,500.

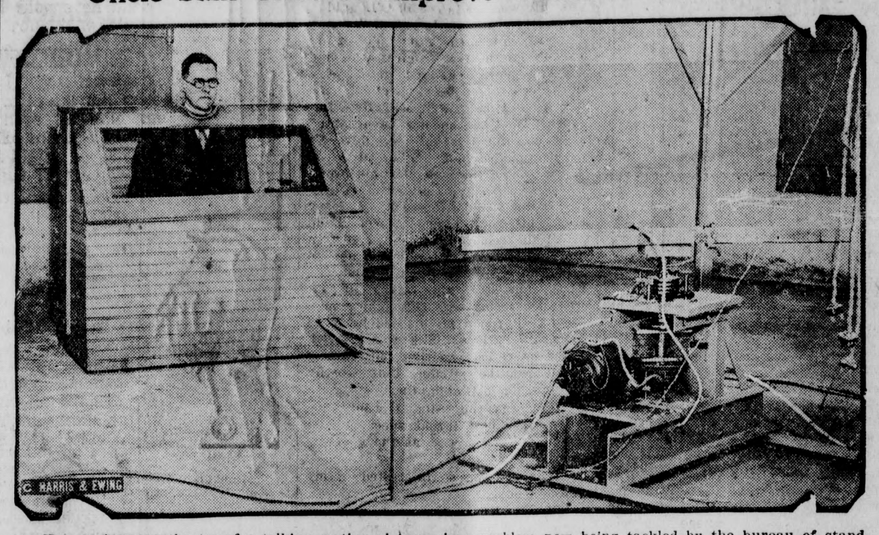
Uncle Sam Tries to Improve Theaters for Talkies



How to improve theaters for talking motion pictures is a problem now being tackled by the bureau of standards. V. L. Chrisler of the sound section, who looks as if he is imprisoned in stocks, is really studying the "echo" effect in this room, and his body and the observing instruments are enclosed so as not to interfere with the tests. It has been found that cushioned seats in talking picture theaters aid in the absorption of the "echo effect."

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

Without a Clew

IT WAS on Christmas night, in 1910, that the first news was made public of what is probably the most baffling and mysterious disappearance of its kind in the police annals of the United States—the unexplained and apparently insoluble vanishing of Dorothy Harriet Camille Arnold, the the daughter of Francis R. Arnold, a wealthy importer.

The facts in the case were few and utterly devoid of sensationalism, thus making the climax stand out with all the force and contrast of lightning against a pitch black sky. On the morning of December 12, thirteen days before any inkling of the affair reached the newspapers, Miss Arnold had left her home at 108 East Seventy-ninth street, New York, supposedly for a morning's shopping. She was in the best of health and spirits and, among the errands which she intended to do, was the purchasing of a dress at one of the Fifth avenue shops. As soon as she found what she wanted she was to call her mother on the telephone and the final decision would then be made.

The thorough and searching investigations of the police and the reporters later developed the fact that Miss Arnold had walked from her home to a store at Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street, where she purchased a box of candy, which she charged to her personal account. The sales check showed that it was about noon when she left the store and, some two hours later, she was at Brentano's book store, Fifth avenue and Twenty-seventh street, where she bought a book which she stated was to be given away as a Christmas present.

Just as she was leaving Brentano's, Miss Arnold met a woman friend and, in response to the usual question as to how she was feeling, replied: "I never felt better in my life," and then, as she was leaving, she added: "I'm going to walk home through Central park. Want to join me?" But the friend declined and Miss Arnold continued on her way—never again to be heard of. Had the friend accompanied her it is possible that one of the greatest mysteries of modern times might never have occurred but, as it happened, Dorothy Arnold went on alone and vanished.

Wishing to avoid publicity as much as possible, the Arnold family purposely suppressed the news of their daughter's disappearance until, at the request of the police, it was given out in order that the publication of her picture and a full description might develop possible clews to her disappearance. But, although there were a number of apparent inconsistencies about the case—probably due to the natural shrinking from the nationwide attention which the affair attracted—nothing definite was ever discovered. The most striking point elicited by the investigations of the newspaper reporters was that, despite the Arnold family's definite statements that their daughter had had no love affairs, she had been carrying on a secret correspondence with a bachelor in Pittsburgh. But it was quite evident that the man in question could have had no connection whatever with the disappearance of the New York heiress and this lead was dropped both by the police and the press.

White slavery, which was at that time very much in the public eye, was popularly blamed for the unsolved mystery but when it came to details even the most astute detectives were at a loss to explain how a strong, athletic girl like Miss Arnold could have been kidnaped and concealed without leaving the slightest trace, while, if she had been made away with, it would have been practically impossible to hide all signs of the body and her distinctive clothing—descriptions of which were flashed to all parts of the world. That Miss Arnold had not planned to leave home was evident from the fact that she left all her jewels and a considerable sum of money in cash behind her and that, on the very morning of her disappearance, she had written several letters relative to a tea in honor of a number of her former schoolmates at Bryn Mawr.

The theory of suicide was untenable because her body would have been found. Premeditated flight was hardly to be considered, while sudden flight would have undoubtedly led to recognition somewhere in the country. Foul play was the only alternative remaining, but in the event that Miss Arnold was either kidnaped or killed, how did those responsible succeed in hiding all traces of their crime from the police of two continents?

This is the question which has puzzled the minds of master detectives like William J. Burns, Chief Flynn of the secret service, Sir E. R. Henry, chief of Scotland Yard, and hundreds of others who have endeavored in vain to solve the riddle without a clew.

Truth and Nothing But, in Doctor's Statement

In asking for the appointment of an unknown man for a rather important federal appointment in his state, Senator Borah said:

"The position calls for a natural-born diplomat and that is what I consider Doctor Blank to be. A successful country doctor has to be a diplomat or he won't survive.

"One day, this chap I've recommended was calling on a cantankerous old man who had collapsed while plowing.

"'Bless you, no!' exclaimed the diplomat. 'That heart of yours will last a lifetime.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Shocked the Waitress

The American colony at Istanbul, Turkey, is chuckling over the linguistic mishap of an elderly American woman missionary, who after long years in Turkey, visited the United States. Lunching in a sedate New York tearoom, the missionary called a waitress and tipping her glass of lemonade, said: "Please bring me some booze." The waitress stared, but the dignified old lady repeated her order unruffled. Unwittingly she was using the Turkish word for "ice."

The BERMUDA ISLANDS

THE Bermudas, island outposts in the Atlantic of the North American continent, have long been a resort for sojourners from the eastern United States, but never before have they been so speedily reached from the mainland as recently when the trip was made from New York by seaplane in about eight hours flying time. Boats from New York require 48 hours for the voyage.

In the Pacific, where there is much island competition, the Bermudas would be a negligible group; but in the almost islandless Atlantic they have played an important role. They form a microcosm, the catastrophes, the vicissitudes, the political, economic, and religious controversies, and the development of whose people, as a solitary unit, far out to sea, reflect much of the world history of the English speaking peoples.

They are a group of what are said to be 365 islands (one for every day in the year) north latitude 32 degrees and west longitude 64 degrees. There are only five important islands, and all of the group are so close together that those capable of use are united by bridges and causeways, so as to give to the sojourner in his drives the impression that they are but one island, with large indenting bays and inlets.

Strung together, they have the form of a fishhook with the stem pointed to the northeast and the curve of the hook to the southwest. From the northeast end to the point of the hook, you can piece out a curving drive 22 or 23 miles long, and the width of the land from sea to sea through which you drive will hardly average a mile. The superficial area of the whole group is 19½ miles.

The islands are nearly 600 miles from Cape Hatteras, the nearest mainland; they are 700 miles from Charleston, S. C., opposite which they lie in the Atlantic; they are nearly 700 miles from New York and about 50 miles farther from Halifax.

They are about 800 miles from the nearest of the West Indies; they are nearly 30 miles from the southern or southeastern edge of that river of warm water, 100 fathoms deep, flowing over an ocean depth 2,500 fathoms, from the gulf of Mexico to New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and beyond to European shores, which we call the Gulf stream.

Pulverized Shell on Volcanic Rock.

They are irregular hills and ridges of pulverized shells, reaching in some places to a height of 250 feet, drifted and deposited by the wind on the top of a mountainous column of volcanic rock rising from the floor of the sea three miles below. This peak is a solitary one in all that part of the Atlantic ocean. It has been covered by this wind-formed limestone and a thinner plaster of coral rock.

After the expedition of H. M. S. Challenger on her scientific exploration of the Atlantic ocean bottom and islands in 1873 had disclosed the lonely column upon which the Bermudas rested, there was an effort to reconcile what seemed a pile of coral rock three miles high in the sea with Darwin's conclusion that the coral animal would not work more than 100 fathoms below the surface.

A desire to find fresh water on the islands led to the sinking of a well 1,200 feet deep, and while it did not bring what was sought, it greatly gratified a lot of puzzled scientific men by disclosing that the coral rock and limestone were a mere cap to what was an old volcano sticking its cratered top up to within less than one thousand feet of the shining surface of the translucent sea.

The top of this undersea mountain is much greater in superficial area than that of the visible islands, but it is everywhere crowned with coral and limestone, which protrude in dangerous reefs on the north, west, and south sides of the islands, as far as eight and ten miles from their shores, sometimes peeping above the surface, and at others lurking just beneath.

One need not say that such a situation makes Bermuda an awkward place for ships to reach and safely land, and this circumstance is an important factor in her history.

Interesting to Scientists.

Bermuda is all by herself in the scientific and naturalist world. Her soil, which is red, is nothing but the result of the working of the weather on the limestone and coral rock. These islands came from the wind and drift and currents of the seas. As one writer says: "Probably we could not select a more perfect example of current-formed islands than the Bermudas."

This origin has turned the closest attention of natural scientists to these islands and brought out from them many articles and volumes on the geology, conchology, zoology, astinology, arachnology, ichthyology, meteorology, and the flora and fauna of this little punctuation point on the surface of the Atlantic.

While we cannot entirely exclude from the enthusiasm and prolific activity of our scientific men the motive which the charm and bodily comfort of the islands furnished for these expeditions thither, the publications manifest an exceptional interest on their part in this tiny spot on the world's and ocean's surface which the peculiar history of its creation has justified.

Some of the most fruitful sources of the spread of life, animal and vegetable, are wind, current, and birds; and here we have the result of them all in an isolated form, so set apart as to permit the most satisfactory study of their results.

There are no more snakes in Bermuda than there are in Ireland. They have a lizard and some varieties of turtle, but that is all of the reptile life.

The turtles must in old times have been of huge size; one, it was said, was large enough to give a good meal from its meat to fifty men, and the eggs and the oil of such monsters were equally useful. There are turtles there still, but they have been discouraged in their expansive ambitions and do not furnish forth a marriage feast as generously as in the dawn of civilization in that little community.

New Varieties of Life Flourish.

The Bermudas are the land of adopted nativity. They are most hospitable to new varieties of life. Some enterprising grower of plants introduced a toad to take care of the insects which were troubling him in his garden, and though this was only in the latter part of the last century, one runs across everywhere frequent evidence of these immigrants, of a size startling to one used to a more modest variety at home.

Very early in the settlement, and before 1620, a vessel brought some enterprising rats, which, with enthusiasm worthy of a better cause, multiplied until they ravaged the islands, ate everything in sight, swam in great multitudes from one island to another, leaving havoc in their train.

Cats were introduced, but to no immediate purpose. Even the fish took part in resisting the rats, and many of the finny tribe were caught with rats in their stomachs. Suddenly they disappeared as they had come and left nothing but a plague of cats, with their night blooming characteristics, as a reminder of this rodent visitation.

The flora of the Bermudas is full of beauty for the observer and full of interest for the man of science. Of the trees and plants and shrubs in the islands, 80 per cent inhabit also the West Indies and southern Florida.

Nearly 9 per cent, or 61 species growing in Bermuda or its waters, are not known to grow anywhere else in the world. These latter are of great interest to naturalists, as they were presumably developed in Bermuda from related plants formerly existing elsewhere, but now mostly extinct, though some may be found elsewhere later.

In the landscape, the Bermuda cedar furnishes the prevailing green. It is the most abundant and characteristic tree of Bermuda. It is the Bermudian juniper, with berries which are edible but not nourishing.

Lovely Flowers and Climate.

The luxuriance and wealth of color of the flora of the Bermudas have attracted the poets, who have sung their beauties.

The purple bougainvillea, with its varying shades in and out of the sunlight, is entrancing in its beauty and welcomes one into the grounds of the government house, climbing over the smoothly cut walls of coral through which the white road makes its way to the home of the governor.

The oleanders are so fine and so gorgeous in their hues that it has been suggested that these be called the Oleander islands. Coffee, indigo, cotton, and tobacco are of spontaneous growth.

It may not recall pleasant associations in the minds of the youthful to say that in no place does the castor oil plant grow more perefectly than here.

The climate of Bermuda has a maximum temperature of about 88 degrees, a minimum of about 48 degrees and a mean of about 70 degrees. This mild climate assists the growth of esculent plants and roots and promotes early growth of onions, potatoes, carrots, tomatoes, and beetroots, as well as lily bulbs and arrowroot, though the last two have not been successful of late.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS
Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

Umpires are human and make mistakes. In my long career I know of only one umpire who always insisted that he never made a mistake in his life. He was the late Silk O'Loughlin, one of the most colorful arbitrators that ever graced the game. O'Loughlin was one of the few umpires who had drawing powers at the gate. The fans liked to see him in action. His famous "Strike Tuh," will live forever. "Tuh" has become an accepted substitute for two in every-day life aside from baseball. O'Loughlin had a remarkable voice and he was proud of it. All umpires have their sensitive points; Silk was mighty fussy about his vocal chords. Well I do recall the remark made by a certain star to Silk one afternoon when he was suffering a trifle from hoarseness. The star, who was a pitcher, was disagreeing with O'Loughlin most of the afternoon on his judgment of balls and strikes. Silk was peeved. After he called one that particularly displeased the pitcher, that worthy person said to O'Loughlin:

"If I was you, Silk, I would see one of the best throat specialists in the city just as soon as the game is over."

"Why are you so interested in my throat trouble?"

"Simply, because, if you ever lose your voice you are through as an umpire, it's your only asset." Silk was furious and in the next inning, anxious to chase the fresh person, he seized an incident that really didn't merit ejection from the game but nevertheless sent the player to the showers. Anyway, like all stories, it went the rounds of the league. Any time a player for any reason wanted to depart from the game, he made unkind remarks about Silk's voice being his only asset as an umpire.

With O'Loughlin there never was a close decision, the player was simply out or safe. I often wondered whether Silk really believed he never missed one in his life.

Sometimes I doubted it but never was I able to get Silk to admit that he might have been wrong. Often I would try to josh him along by telling him I thought he missed a certain play, that I would never mention it to anyone if he admitted it, but I always failed in my efforts to pin O'Loughlin down to the fact that possibly he might have been wrong.

O'Loughlin was Irish. It is hardly necessary to state that fact; his name is sufficient. Never will I forget the delight Silk took in one of his favorite ejaculations to protesting players. As the Clancys, McCarthys, O'Neills and Burkes would cluster around Silk and tell him how blind he was, he would listen for a time and then with a wave of his arm that meant trouble would shout:

"Get out of here. Never missed one in my life. Too late to start now. The pope for religion, O'Loughlin for baseball, both infallible."

That remark always drew the ire of the players, but they went on their way because they knew that was the final ultimatum before chasing them to the showers. That was his favorite line for handling ball players of Irish extraction.

If after some decision Silk perceived that among the players protesting his ruling were men bearing the name of Schmidt, Mueller, Schneider and others of German extraction, he would listen for a time in evident disgust and then, having heard enough, he would invariably say:

"If you fellows are not back in your position when I reach the plate, all of you are through for the day. There isn't any use of being Dutch if you're not dumb.'

In handling out his line of repartee, Silk didn't overlook a thing. If a player had a certain outstanding fault, he never failed to remind him of it. When some athlete with a poor batting average would strenuously protest to a strike, he would usually squelch the young man thusly:

"So I kicked the one, eh? Well you sure have your nerve kicking on anything I do. I happened to be looking at the batting averages this morning and you ain't hitting your weight. Get in there and hit: the pitcher is supposed to be fooling you, not me."

Baseball suffered a severe loss in the death of O'Loughlin. When this country got into the World war and baseball was temporarily suspended, O'Loughlin, close to fifty years of age, felt that he wanted to be of some service to this country. He obtained a berth in the intelligence department and was assigned to Boston. When the "flu" hit that section of the country he was one of its first victims, dying within a few days. I usually was paired up with O'Loughlin. He and I umpired the final game of the year in Washington when the two big leagues decided to curtail their schedule.

DREYFUSS RIVALS McGRAW AS TRADER

Boss of Pirates Has Let Many Stars Go to Others.

When Barney Dreyfuss, the gentleman owning the Pittsburgh Pirates, signed the documents that recently moved his star hurler, Burleigh Grimes, to the Braves, he brought himself dangerously close to the all-time title for bad dealing. Only Mr. John McGraw's record for erring in the ivory market prevents Dreyfuss from making an undisputed claim to the doubtful honor.

However, there is one thing to be said in defense of the Pirate boss. He has accumulated a bad name as a trader because of his habit of letting go stars with whom he has differences. He doesn't get the value in return. With Mr. McGraw it always has been a case of swapping with the idea of getting the better of the bargain. He has tried and failed in this so often that even the men with whom he is associated in baseball regard him as a baby in the hands of experts. Whenever McGraw mentions a trade, there usually are plenty of other owners interested. They know by experience that the edge is in their favor.

Speaking of Shires and his fistic tendencies, as ball players do, witnesses swear that there were at least two members of the White Sox—both outfielders—who were given a wide berth by the Great One last season whenever he felt pugilistically inclined. This seems to dispose of the idea that Art, merely because he licked the manager, is or was the No. 1 fighting man on the Chicago club.

The Phillies collected 153 home runs last year and Babe 46, but they don't pay off on that basis. The Bambino's 1930 salary of $80,000 probably exceeds the combined pay checks of all eight of the Philly regulars this year, outside of the pitchers.

Ban Johnson was the outstanding exponent of the theory that rowdyism and bluster should be deleted completely from baseball. His plan has been carried forward steadily.

Now comes Charles Stoneham, owner of the Giants. He declares that baseball is entirely too gentlemanly. He is quoted as follows:

"It is my opinion that baseball has become too tame. The fans want to see more excitement resulting from aggressiveness of players who consider themselves victims of unfair decisions. I do not believe in downright rowdyism, but I'd like to see a player who thinks he has received a rank decision show he has feelings instead of being forced to act like a dummy because of the rules regulating the conduct of players today."

In addition to a flock of athletes in other events whose names are well known, Southern California has a high jump sensation in Bob Van Osdel, who bounced over the bar at 6 feet 7¼ inches in a spring dual meet, only an inch short of Harold Osborn's world record. Van Osdel cleared over 6.3 in high school. He is only a sophomore now with lofty ambitions and doing very well by them.

The University of Pennsylvania tennis team will engage in 15 matches this season, according to the schedule released by H. Jamison Swarts, assistant graduate manager of athletics.

Matches have been arranged with Haverford, Colgate, New York university, Harvard, Washington and Lee, Rutgers, Princeton, Washington and Jefferson, Columbia, Lehigh, Carnegie Tech, Swarthmore, Gettysburg, Cornell and Navy.

A nine-hole golf course is being laid out in the front yard of Bridewell, or county jail at Chicago. James Curran, superintendent, said there is no intention of letting the prisoners play golf. Some of the nicer prisoners may be privileged to caddy now and then, but the course will be for the use of judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys with an hour or so loose from the courtroom. Prisoners now are at work on the course.

Dangers Forgotten in Keen Desire for "Drag"

This may not be your idea of a big moment, but it sure was one big moment for me.

I was a first-class private in the Seventh Machine Gun battalion, Third division.

On June 15, 1918, we were ordered to take positions on Hill 204. At this point the lines were very close together; in fact we could hear the boches talking.

We were given strict orders not to smoke, for fear the enemy would locate our positions. Anyone disregarding these orders was very liable to be court martialed.

I was a runner at the time and was about all in for want of a smoke. Determined to get a few drags regardless of orders, I went into the shelter half, crawled under a blanket, and had just nicely got started to smoke when in strode Lieutenant Hose. "Who in h—l is smoking?" he bellowed. I knew I would be discovered anyway, and fearing the worst, I answered nervously, "Private Allan, sir."

He responded in a much lower voice, "For G—d's sake give me a drag—I'm dying for a smoke!"—Stanley H. Allan in American Legion Monthly.

Mother's Day

Sunday, May 11th, is Mother's Day, and you who are fortunate enough to have a living mother, should remember her and do her particular honor on that day.

Many are the mothers who are longing for letters from absent sons or daughters, and, while you may be cold and indifferent, remember it was Mother who cared for your many wants when you were a helpless child. It was she who nurses you when sick, and it is she who is praying for you daily that the good God may bless you in your noble undertakings.

Tell her how much you love and appreciate her. To her you are still her little boy or girl.

Let the Wild Flowers Live

Herewith is offered a mild suggestion to persons who, while enjoying a country outing, are unable to differentiate between the beauties of a protected field of wild flowers and the desolation of a field which has been stripped and left to weeds and grass by the wayside vandals. If they must pick something which does not belong to them, let them try picking dandelions.

The leaves can form one of the most wholesome and appetizing dishes known to modern cookery. It is the spinach with a kick.

And no one will begrudge their passing. Vandals may exercise their most destructive inclinations against the dandelion. Tear them up, root and branch. Bedeck the automobiles with them. Throw them into the boiling aldron. Serve them with oil or vinegar. Eat them alive. Do your worst—to the dandelions. But let the wild flowers live.

Conditions in Business

The country shows signs of creditable recovery from the shock of the stock market collapse of last autumn. While there is a considerable amount of unemployment, the opening of spring operations promise to take care of most of this. Reports from all over the United States indicate recovery more rapid than had been expected.

Redwood City Is Our City

Redwood City is our city. Our homes are here, our friends are here. We are more interested in Redwood City than any other city in all the world.

We have faith in the future of Redwood City. We believe that it will grow to be a bigger and better city as times goes by. Many of us here have seen it grow from a little village of unpaved streets, board walks, oil lamps and tallow candles to a thriving, happy little city possessed of many of the modern conveniences.

We can make Redwood City even bigger and better and more prosperous, if we all pull together and work for the things that are best for Redwood City.

We can make of Redwood City whatever we wish to make of it. There is enough energy, talent and resource here to build the kind of a city we would like to have.

Let's resolve to make it bigger and better than ever. As the boys say in the football game, "Let's go!"

Reducing Auto Accidents

Certain eastern states have reduced automobile accidents about 20 per cent, through license laws requiring examination of all new drivers, and enforced by a centralized state motor vehicle bureau, according to Sidney J. Williams, director of the Public Safety Division of the National Safety Council. So far only 17 of the 48 states have passed such laws, and all but five of these are in the east.

There is certainly something amiss when any person, irrespective of his mental and physical qualifications, is allowed to operate a potentially deadly vehicle upon the public highways. This condition has been unquestionably responsible for many of the 30,000 annual deaths in automobile accidents.

Hundreds of thousands of new cars go into use each year. Speed ranges are constantly rising. Traffic congestion becomes more and more a problem. It is the height of folly, under such conditions, to allow irresponsible, incompetent drivers to use our highways where they menace the life and property of every other motorist.

Watch Government

Relief from burdensome taxation will be obtained when voters insist that their elected representatives provide a dollar's worth of service for every dollar expended.

Waste, incompetence and duplication of effort are commonplace in government machinery. And the taxpayer receives the bill.

More business-like efficiency, not more tax money, is what is neded in government. To achieve this every taxpayer must scrutinize governmental programs. He must see that government does not go outside its legitimate sphere of activity to experiment with business at the public expense.

An unwatched bureaucracy can hardly be expected to worry about the sensible expenditure of the taxpayers' money.

Mother's Day

SCOUT CAMP TO OPEN AT PESCADERO

June 14th to July 22d Set As Season For Scout Camp

San Mateo County District, Boy Scouts of America, announces the fifth annual season of the San Mateo County Boy Scouts Training Camp, Pescadero, California, commencing Saturday, June 14th to July 22nd, 1930. The first two two-week sessions ending July 12th are for the Boy Scouts and the last ten days, namely, from July 12th to July 22nd are reserved exclusively for the Cubs (Junior Scouts) between the ages of 8 and 12 years. The camp, as in the past summers, will be under the personal direction of Edward A. Barrer, County Field Scout Executive, who has had fifteen years experience as a boys-camp director. Assisting Mr. Barrer is an able staff of scoutmasters and junior leaders trained in the fundamentals of scoutcraft through actual experience in former camps.

The enrollment is limited to four hundred Scouts, or two hundred in each of the two-week periods. Applications for enrollment for either of the two periods or both will be accepted from Scouts in the order received on a "first come, first served" basis. Scouts are warned to file their applications as early as possible, as advance indications presage a record enrollment for the 1930 season, with the possibility of late applicants having to be turned away for want of accommodations. However, every effort will be made to take care of all who wish to attend.

The plans have just been completed by the Camp Committee, under the chairmanship of George H. Arthur of San Mateo, call for the provision of every facility that the camp has afforded in years past, with substantial improvement along some lines. The charge per boy is eight dollars per week, and it is emphasized that this nominal amount barely covers actual costs of food and lodging and is one of the lowest charges found in any camp.

Camp Pescadero has won recognition as one of the outstanding camps in the country for leadership, program and camp facilities. It enjoys a clean bill of health unmarred by a single case of serious illness or accident for its four consecutive years of existence. Every precaution is taken to insure the health and safety of the Scouts during their stay. That the camp is of direct benefit to health and general physical development is amply attested by actual individual card records of former seasons on file at the county headquarters, which shows an average gain in weight per boy of from three to six pounds per period spent in camp.

Not only does the camp minister to physiques; a full program of activities makes an inactive moment impossible and provides training in the Scout requirements and various lines of handcrafts adapted to the preferences of the individual Scouts. Contact with older Scouts and men and the responsibility of "being on his own" develops the lad's sense of self-reliance; association with boys of his own age gives him training in discipline and group co-operation and an opportunity to develop budding leadership ability. But the best testimony of the success of the camp is that of a boy who has been there and enjoyed those never-to-be forgotten weeks of pure fun, adventure and action; or of fathers or mothers who have actually seen the camp in action and observed its salutary effects on the character of their own sons.

Carrington Operetta Soon to be Produced

"Paper Prayers," the newest operetta of Mr. Otis M. Carrington choral instructor, will have Kathleen Juday as the heroine, O Matu San. The other characters have also been chosen and are now practising their parts for six weeks. The musical play is to be given Friday night, May 23.

The marriage of O Matu San and Mr. Maruyana, Joe Paron, was planned with a "go-between" by the young peoples' parents, even though they thought they would get married in the manner Americans do. Mr. Maruyana has just returned from the United States and had made a bet with a friend that he could win a wife American fashion.

Falling unintentionally from the garden wall into O Matu San's garden which was the scene of her father's party, Mr. Maruyana discovers that the young peoples' parents have decided that he and O Matu San are to be married. Mr. Maruyana is willing, and they both decide that the Japanese way is the best after all.

PESCADERO- LA HONDA ROAD REMAINS CLOSED

The road from Pescadero to La Honda, via the San Mateo Memorial Park, is still closed, according to the Touring Department of the National Automobile Club. The road from the San Mateo Memorial Park to the Alpine Road is also closed to traffic.

THOSE WHO KNOW GOOD FOOD

INSIST ON ICE REFRIGERATION

«« and so does every thinking person »»

Those who know good food demand that salads be fresh and crisp . . . that their color be natural and appetizing to the eye. A highly developed sense of taste immediately detects the flat taste of food which has been subject to moisture-robbing substitutes for ice refrigeration.

To people like this . . . there is no substitute for ice. They realize that delicate foods, such as lettuce, preserved in a circulation of clean, washed air remain fresh, crisp and green.

They know the value of a constant coldness (modern ice boxes maintain a temperature under 50°) and they know that all foodstuffs in their ice box are untainted and unchangod by any unpleasant odors or gases. They INSIST on ice.

With beautiful white enamel and pastel colored ice refrigerators selling in the modest price range of $25 to $65 . . . there is no comparison between ice and chemical-electrical refrigeration either in cost or performance. Think! The first cost of a chemical—electrical refrigerator will pay your ice bills for twelve years.

Your own ice man will take in your old-fashioned ice box on a new scientifically designed refrigerator, with easy terms . . . and a generous trade-in allowance.

See your ice man and end your refrigeration problems today.

Columbia University helped to design the modern ice refrigerators now being displayed by your ice man. They represent remarkable advances in construction, insulation and sanitation — and use surprisingly little ice.

Citadels of Peace Tower Skyward Symbolizing the Nation's Progress

By RICHARD STORRS COE

FORTUNATE indeed is the traveler who catches his first glimpse of New York from the deck of an in-coming ship. As the vessel steams through the Narrows and across the Upper Bay to her North River pier, the New York skyline is unfolded in a changing panorama unique in its groupings of mass and form. The tall buildings that cluster about the lower end of Manhattan Island stand out sharply with pinnacles, pyramids and colonnaded summits outlined against the sky. Here and there a wisp of light gray smoke or steam floats lazily from the top of one of these man-made cliffs. A few low buildings accentuate the height of the sky-scrapers. It is a blasé traveler who will stay below while his ship is passing the Battery.

As she slowly wends her way up the Hudson, escorted by puffing tugs, the vessel leaves behind the towering range of the down-town office buildings. The city spreads out in a wide plateau of lesser structures over which loom here and there isolated buildings or groups of buildings of heroic proportions. One of the most impressive of these, seen from the river, is the massive pile which a French commentator has described as possessing "a certain barbaric majesty,"—the New York Telephone Building.

Alone, dominating the low buildings on the adjoining blocks, it rises by gargantuan steps and terraces and set-backs, drawing the eye irresistibly upward to its massive summit. Deep shadows lurk in recesses half a dozen stories in height, but the sun and the wind from the river have full play on the myriad windows that glitter in the vast buff surfaces of the structure. It is no mere brick box, like so many of the earlier skyscrapers. It expresses something. It has personality—this telephone building.

West-bound, another steamship moves slowly away from the Embarcadero and heads into San Francisco Bay en route to the Golden Gate and thence out into the Pacific Ocean. The passengers, gathered at the rail for a last look at the City, see vivid against the California sky a great white tower. Its proportions, its soaring lines give to this building an aspect almost of delicacy, despite its size. The monumental effect is heightened by the whiteness of the structure and by its aloofness.

Like that other building far away on the banks of the Hudson, this too, stands alone, a giant in comparison with those about it. High it towers above the section south of Market Street,—this new Telephone Building, headquarters of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. And, gazing at it, the traveler cannot but feel that this building, too, stands for more than stone and steel and mortar,—that it represents not unworthily a certain spirit and a certain aspiration.

Utility Combined With Beauty

These two buildings, separated by a Continent, are representative of the best in modern telephone architecture, but they are not unique. Almost midway between them—at St. Louis—there stands another great castellated pile which houses and typifies the headquarters of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Denver, too, has such a building. So has Cleveland. So has Newark. So has Montreal.

In style as well as in size, buildings such as these represent a significant development in the growth of American cities. They are evidence of the fact that the utmost in utility, comfort and convenience can be economically achieved in modern business buildings which are at the same time so beautiful as to be objects of legitimate civic pride to the communities in which they stand.

In no field of American endeavor, probably, has there been more marked progress toward the attainment of beauty in recent years than in architecture. Discriminating use of choice woods, face brick, stucco, limestone and other materials gives individuality and distinction to homes and business buildings of the better sort. Progressive architects today seek a style that will harmonize with its surroundings and be appropriate to the climate and perhaps to the historical background of the locality. Developing, modifying, adapting to new conditions the architectural styles of the Old World, our architects are gradually working toward the creation of a distinctively American school, which today finds expression particularly in what has been called the "American perpendicular" style employed in some of our modern skyscrapers.

A Distinctively American Architectural Form

This architectural form may be briefly described in non-technical language as placing emphasis on perpendicular lines which lead the eye upward unchecked by horizontal interruptions, save where, at intervals, succeeding tiers of stories are set back, leaving terraces which lend to the finished structure somewhat the effect of a gigantic stepsided pyramid, surmounted perhaps by a lofty central tower. This type of construction, besides being immensely impressive, has very practical value in admitting an abundance of light and air not only to the building itself but to the street below. New York and other municipalities, anxious to avoid having additional business streets transformed into dim canyons with the perpendicular walls of closely set skycrapers rising continuously from the building line, have adopted zoning regulations which require the upper stories of high buildings to be set back at levels varying with the width of the street on which they front. With the impetus thus given to the use of this new type of architecture, imaginative artists are already portraying the city of the future as a vast expanse of pyramidal buildings rising step by step to the limits of economical construction.

Among the most notable examples of this new architectural style are the group of headquarters buildings completed during the last few years by the telephone companies at New York, Newark, Cleveland, St. Louis and San Francisco. L'Illustration, the famous French weekly, published an article some time ago on the evolution of the skyscraper in the development of American cities. Out of five representative American skyscrapers shown in full page illustrations in this French publication, three were telephone buildings—those at St. Louis, New York and San Francisco. The other two were the Chicago Tribune Building and the Woolworth Building.

The Bell Telephone System may fairly be said to have made an outstanding contribution to the development of one of the most hopeful trends in modern American architecture,—the working out of a distinctive style adapted to American conditions and expressing something of the vitality and aspiration as well as the solidity which we like to believe are representative of the best elements in our modern American business life.

28 APPLICATIONS FOR AID GRANTED TO COUNTY AGED

1,358 Have So Far Been Granted Old Age Pension in California; 64 Have Applied From Here

By JAMES ROWE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 8—(UP)—Needy aged of San Mateo county, of whom 64 have forwarded applications to the State division of aged, have had 28 of them approved, while one has been denied or automatically cancelled through death of the applicant.

"In spite of the time and careful inspection necessary in judging every application," said Miss Esther De Turberville, chief, "we have to date approved 1,358 of the 4,321 applications on file. Only 37 have been denied or cancelled."

Los Angeles county has forwarded more applications than any other county—480, while Butte county applicants have been most favored so far with 142 of their pleas approved.

"The outstanding feature in looking over these applications, all from people over 70 years of age," said Miss De Turbeville, "is the fact that although faced with permanent unemployment, they still complain that 'State aid is only necessary until I can find regular work.' Courage and optimism is an outstanding impression given while reading the petitions."

Dramatic and interesting are a few of the applications wherein reports of physical condition are given. Here are a few of the answers: "Broken leg, arm and chest and generally all in."

An old saw mill employee claims, "shy of toes," while another who was a saw filer and mender of mowing machines says, "Only one finger left on each hand one leg off at the knee and other foot partly gone, but can walk very well on crutches."

Other complaints are: "Rheumatism and the likes of that"; or "struck on the head with a 40-foot pipe, cracked my neck and sorter put my legs out of commission," while another cites a peculiar ailment which he calls, "heart affection."

Each of these old men ended his plea with statements such as this: "I worked for many years for a lumber company and could be useful yet, but I am too old. They refuse to let me work."

A study is being made of employment suitable to conditions of these old people and thus fit them for occupation that will keep them happy.

The northern finny tribe are awaiting for his coming, and if he does not bring the proper bait nary a trout will be caught.

Andy F. Monte, charged with being drunk while driving an automobile on Santa Cruz avenue on April 30, appeared before Judge Buck at Redwood City yesterday and pleaded guilty to the charge. The court on suggestion of Monte's attorney, Jas. T. O'Keefe, was admitted to probation for a period of one year. Monte is not to touch a drop of intoxicating liquor for that period.

On May 18, the Jewish Center of Menlo Park will hold a picnic in the Menlo Park Hotel grounds. Special cars will run from San Francisco to the grounds. In days of old, the park was the scene of many happy gatherings. The dancing platform under the oaks at the end of the lot furnished fun for both young and old, while neath the whispering pines tables loaded with tempting viands appeased the sharpened appetities of the hungry multitude. Fifty years ago the Turn Verin society annually picknicked there. They were big social affairs that brought hundreds to Menlo Park. Trains brought large crowds while the members at Redwood City headed by a brass band marched always from that city here, meeting the special train as it arrived from the city. Those were glorious days. But few are left to relate the gayety of those scenes long ago.

Officer Lintner last Monday espied a valuable limousine coming down the highway zig zaging. He followed the machine and arrested the driver. On examination of the car he discovered a gallon jug of wine of ancient vintage, which he confiscated. The driver of the automobile was taken to Redwood City. This was Lintner's first arrest since his appointment a few days ago.

Atherton Census Shows Growth

According to the census report the population of Atherton is 1,374, a big increase from the census taken ten years ago. Mayor Harris is very well pleased with the figures. Atherton is a place of homes and is not a business district.

First Glider Race May Take Place At So. City Hills

First Race In History Will Be Held In Bay Region

That the first Glider race in history is to be held in the San Francisco bay region seems certain as a result of a challenge issued in San Francisco this week by Lieutenant Allen Chapman, of Crissy Field, to Henry Mattley, president of the Mattley Airplane Company of San Bruno.

Lieutenant Chapman has recently became a glider fan after taking a few flights in his new Mattley Glider and feels certain of victory in the coming race. Mattley has accepted the challenge and work is being rushed in a sister ship to Chapman's glider to fly in the race.

Points being considered for the start are the Twin Peaks, of San Francisco, the South City hills in San Mateo county, Mt. Tamalpias in Marin county, and Mt. Diablo, in Contra Costa county. Surveys of the terrain and air currents are being made to determine the most favorable time and place for the take-off.

WOODSIDE

The children of the primary grades at the Portola school held a 'pet show' on Thursday at which, in box or basket, or on leash, were exhibited nearly every specimen domestic animal that lived with Noah during the days of the Flood. The primary children of the Woodside school, returning the compliment paid when the Portola pupils visited the May Day fete last week, went in a body to see the exhibit.

The Parent-Teacher Association held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon. It is planned to take the members of the graduating class for a trip through Stanford University, including a visit to the museum, library and art gallery with lunch at Stanford Union.

The new store being constructed for Neuman Bros. is about completed and the transfer of stock from the old store will soon begin. The new building is in the Spanish style with tile roof and adds much to the appearance of the village. This store has always been the center of the village life and its new location will add to its attractiveness.

Construction has been resumed upon the theater building being erected on the west line of his property by George Whittell.

For many years it has been the custom of Mayor James Rolph to eat his breakfast at the S. and M. restaurant here. He makes the stop here on his way to his ranch on the Alpine district to spend the day. Last Sunday morning he was greeted by a number of well wishers who gathered at the restaurant to honor the net governor of California. Mr. Rolph was happy and delighted to meet his old friends in Menlo Park. The mayor has a great liking for this city and has many friends here who are going to "plug" for him for governor. The mayor's majority in Menlo Park will be large.

Mayor Weeden is planning many improvements for Menlo Park, among which will be cleaning of the main streets that detract and the eradication of the hideous signs within the city limits that detract from the beauty of the landscape. A new city hall will probably be considered in the near future. It is certainly needed.

Brown Building Sold for $25,000

The Brown building on the corner of Santa Cruz avenue and the highway and owned by J. C. Brown was sold on Wednesday to John Sutton, Jr., young son of John Sutton, the Atherton millionaire. The sum of $25,000 was paid for the choice property. The building was erected during the war and was leased to Roos Brothers who conducted a clothing store, carrying kahki uniforms and other equipment for soldiers who to the number of forty thousand were located at Camp Fremont. Sales were large and profitable. After the war the concern moved to Palo Alto. John Sutton, father of the buyer, promoted the Dumbarton bridge for a time managing it and putting in running condition before retiring from its management. Mr. Brown is to remain in Menlo Park and will conduct his confectionary store in the building. The sale is the largest that has taken place in Menlo Park for many years. Mr. Sutton has faith in the growth and prosperity of the city and has invested his money as a demonstration of that faith. He knows the city will grow and is certain of rich returns on his investment.

Menlo Park Girl Artist Is Honored

Friends are congratulating Miss Lou Rusk MacLean, Hermosa Way, Menlo Park; on two of her pictures being accepted by the San Francisco Art Association for exhibition at the Legion of Honor building in San Francisco from May 3 to June 3. Pictures from many sections of the United States will be exhibited. Miss MacLean has studied painting at the California School of Fine Arts.

Menlo Census Shows Remarkable Growth In A Decade

According to figures from Washington Menlo Park has a population of 2,414, which is an increase of 1,594 over the 1920 census, giving the city a percentage growth in population of 194 per cent. This percentage is only exceeded by Glendale that has grown 362 per cent. Menlo Park outstrips Palo Alto with only 148 per cent. This demonstration of growth is satisfactory to every citizen of Menlo Park. It is the most beautiful city on the peninsula, with all the natural advantages, school facilities and potential possibilities unequalled. The growth of the city from now on will be marvelous.

Kiwanis Club Enjoys Talk on Mothers' Day

One of the most enjoyable meetings of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club was held Wednesday in celebration of Mother's Day, which occurs Sunday. This being the nearest meeting to that day the entire program was arranged in accordance with this idea.

The chairman of the meeting was C. M. Doxsee and the speaker was the Rev. Clarence H. Stevens, pastor of the Congregational Church. Rev. Stevens talked on Mother's Day and his address was enjoyed by all.

An interesting feature of the meeting was some musical numbers and a mentalist act afforded the club by Charles Curran of the Grafts Shows, which are playing at Five Points.

WATER PROBLEMS TO BE STUDIED BY LEGISLATURE

Growing Need of Water in South and in San Joaquin and in Delta Region to Receive Consideration

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 8.—(UP)—Engineering studies of California's gigantic water conservation program will be completed by the end of 1930.

If the plan is found feasible, the State will next launch an investigation into ways and means for bringing the general scheme into realization.

This was announced here by State Engineer Edward Hyatt, at the national convention of the American Society of Civil Engineers. California's water surveys will have cost approximately one million dollars by the end of the present year, he said.

"Southern California, with 20 per cent of the land and only 1 per cent of the water, has more than half of California's population and assessed valuation," Hyatt said. "It is undergoing a water shortage of such severity that relief is imperative.

" It is beyond the power either of the people of the San Joaquin valley and Southern California, whose underground supply is insufficient, or of the delta area, to remedy conditions facing them."

As a means of meeting the approaching water crisis in the State, Hyatt mentioned the anticipated Boulder dam supply for Southern California, and the possibility of transporting excess water from the Sacramento river into the San Joaquin valley.

He hinted broadly that the proposed $80,000,000 Kennett dam on Upper Sacramento river may be one of the first projects under the State program when he declared that his studies had shown conclusively that a reservoir could be put to multiple uses. These he listed as flood control, hydro-electric power development, irrigation, salinity control, industrial and municipal and domestic supply.

It is apparent that a conservative plan, carried out under State auspices, and partly or wholly by State bond issue, must assist all portions of the State in need and not be local in character," Hyatt concluded. It must properly take into account the various sections of the State in such a way as to be satisfactory to the voters of the entire State, who must ultimately pass upon it. Wide vision, sound business judgment and complete and accurate information are essential to the success of such an undertaking."

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMETO, Cal., May 8—(UP)—Barnstorming trips throughout the State are now in fashion for gubernatorial candidates.

If any voter doesn't get a chance to shake hands with Governor Young, Mayor Rolph or District Attorney Fitts, between now and August 26, it won't be the fault of the three candidates.

Mayor Rolph is making increased use of the airplane in hurrying from place to place. Now it's reported that before the campaign ends the genial mayor will be traveling in his own cabin plane, all fitted up like a pullman car.

John A. McGilvray, Sacramento lawyer, has been named campaign manager for Rolph in Sacramento county. McGilvray was legislative counsel of the State in 1922 and 23 until Governor Friend W. Richardson made him chairman of the Industrial Accident Commission. After the election of Governor Young he sat in the governor's council as director of industrial relations until 1928.

Another surprise to political observers was the announcement by Rex B. Goodcell, defeated by Governor Young at the primaries in 1926, that he would support the governor for re-election. Goodcell issued a strong endorsement of the Young administration and said, "It's too early to guess the outcome, but I think the governor will come down to the Tehachapi with a substantial plurality and will add materially to that plurality in the eight southern counties."

Although no special reference was made to the campaign, this month's meeting of Governor Young's cabinet had a strong undertone of pre-election preparations. Directors submitted carefully-written reports stressing the leadership and humanitarian policies of the governor, and relegating their own personal achievements to the background.

If you think the campaign isn't getting warm, you should hear some of the "bear stories" they're passing around these days. Governor Young will never announce, says one. Buron Fitts is a physical wreck, and will probably withdraw, is another. State Controller Ray E. Riley has been beseeched to re-enter the race. Congressman Phil D. Swing will enter the lists as standard bearer for the Hiram Johnson wing of the Republican Party. And so on, ad infinitum.

Los Angeles and San Francisco offices have already been obtained for the three candidates. George R. Bush, formerly chief of the legislative counsel bureau during the Stephens administration, has been named campaign manager for Fitts in Southern California. Opening of Governor Young's offices on Market street, San Francisco, awaits only the gonernor's formal announcement. In Sacramento the Young-for-Governor headquarters have been active more than a month.

Sacramento was saddened by the sudden death of Senator Pat Gray of San Francisco, veteral of 12 years' service in the upper house. "Pat" was one of the most popular members of the State legislature. His passing removed a strong contender from the San Francisco senatorial contest, which will now be staged between Senators J. J. Crowley and Roy Fellom, both present members.

MENLO PARK MAN HELD FOR THEFT

L. L. Wiggins, a resident of College Way, Menlo Park, was arrested Wednesday by Officer Frank M. Lintner of the Menlo Park police on a warrant from San Jose. Wiggins is charged with petty theft of labor in Santa Clara county. The arrest was made on a warrant sworn out in the court of Justice of the Peace Grandon Miller of San Jose. He was booked at the jail here by Lintner, and later released on posting $100 cash bail.

Ice Manufacture, Leading Business, Says Association

The public is eager to know about the ice industry, because it is becoming conscious of the importance of refrigeration to daily health and comfort, according to Leslie C. Smith, secretary, National Association of Ice Industries.

"The ice industry today ranks among the leading American businesses," Mr. Smith states, "and the American people unfailingly are interested in big business. Approximately 61,000,000 tons of ice were produced in this country in 1929 and marketed at the conservatively estimated figure of $440,000,000. The per capita consumption of ice was in 1929 about 950 pounds. Over 12,000,000 ice refrigerators are now in use, far in excess of the number of refrigerators used with all other refrigerants combined. Ice is the tried-and-true, most popular refrigerant

"Recent statistics show that ice is used only in approximately half of the homes in the United States, about 43 per cent of the homes having no refrigeration at all. In about 30 per cent of the homes ice is used only during warm weather, and in only 20 per cent is it used continuously the year around.

"If the 30 per cent who use only in the summer would become convinced of the necessity of using ice the year around and if the 50 per cent who do not use ice at all could be educated into the use of ice even in the summer, think what a tremendous increase in the market for ice would be developed. The present immense ice tonnage could be more than doubled.

"Progress, however, is being made in informing the public of the many advantages of continuous ice usage and the average annual gains of the industry at large are 8 per cent in tonnage. Ice is being used for many more purposes than for food protection alone and new uses are steadily being discovered."

Oiling Improves Big Basin Road

The oiling of the Big Basin road, from Saratoga Gap into Big Basin, provides an exceptionally good direct route from San Francisco to Santa Cruz, reports the Touring Department of the National Automobile Club. This improvement effects a siving in both time and mileage.

From San Francisco, the Skyline boulevard is traversed via Crystal Springs Lakes to the La Honda road; thence over the recently completed stretch of highway to Saratoga Gap. This route offers excellent oiled-gravel highway throughout.

The present oiling operations will give an oiled surfaced road into either of the California Redwood Park or to the junction of the San Lorenzo Creek Road, the latter offering a most direct route into Boulder Creek. Pavement etxends from Boulder Creek, via Felton, to Santa Cruz.

A telephone call for aid traveled 100 miles the other day in a summons for an ambulance.

It seems that a telephone operator in San Francisco, Miss Marie Lutich, was calling John Sheed at Oroville, 100 miles away from San Francisco. While the wire was kept open, the operator suddenly heard a voice calling, "Send an ambulance quick." She at once notified the Oroville operator, and an ambulance was sent. It was found that a scaffold had collapsed at a hotel under construction, and that one of the workmen had suffered a fractured skull.

Cast Selected For Year's Play On Tamalpais

'Sunken Bell' Chosen By Mountain Players

Announcement of the cast of players who will present "The Sunken Bell," as this year's Mountain Play on the wooded slope of Mt. Tamilpais, presents a list of notable names in dramatic circles of the bay district, for the Gerhart Hauptman pageant-drama.

The part of Rautendelein, the elfin creature of the woods, who is half-human, and half-supernatural, is assigned to June deRoche, who has been seen in San Francisco and in Oakland in dramatic leads, and has been a radio favorite over KFRC and NBC.

Supporting Miss deRoche, in the unfolding of the Hauptman allegory, will be Roy Sexton, who will play the Schoolmaster; Lyman Henry, playing the Nickelman; Frederic S. Smith, as the Wood Sprite; Bernard deRoche, as the Vicar; and Bernita Thompson as the neighbor.

"The Sunken Bell" calls for a large cast of supernumary actors, playing elves, dwarfs, gnomes and other figures of the picturesque German mythology, who mingle the supernatural and the human elements in the poetic pageant-drama.

Baldwin McGaw, who last year directed the successful presentation of "Peer Gynt" for the Mountain Play Association, will again this year direct the Tamalpais production.

Last year's play drew a crowd of 7,000 persons to the open-air amphitheatre, and it is estimated that this year's performance will attract even a larger crowd.

State to War On Tuberculosis In Herds of Cattle

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 8.—(UP)—California's war against tobercular cattle is on.

Now that the Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of the legislative act permitting the reimbursement of livestock owners for cattle killed under the bovine tuberculosis law, a statewide campaign is to be made against the disease.

Such was the report of George H. Hecke, director of agriculture, to Governor C. C. Young. Hecke announced that Shasta county on April 15 was declared to be the fifth tuberculosis modified accredited area in the State. Modoc, Lassen, Plumas and Tehama counties have already qualified for this distinction, which requires that 99½ per cent of the dairy and breeding cattle be free from the disease.

"Siskiyou county probably will join this group in a few months," said Hecke. Placer county commissioners have set May 6 for action on establishment of an eradication area. Butte county will submit the area proposal to general vote. Ventura county is taking steps to act for eradication, and San Luis Obispo county is considering an ordinance requiring, cattle entering the county, to be accompanied by tuberculin test certificates.

"Lake county supervisors, conceding to wishes of range cattle owners, have rescinded their action of last fall, requesting the area plan. All dairymen of the county are unanimously in favor of an eradication program.

"Sonoma and Marin counties are considering the tuberculosis eradication calf-raising area plan. Del Norte county is well embarked on its calf-raising program, although a problem presented to the Department of Agriculture is the devising of simple efficient methods of pasteurizing milk sufficient for ranch use."

In the county are 2,776 cattle froee from tuberculosis, Hecke continued, while 3,700 cattle have not been tested. It is this latter group of animals that eventually will be replaced by healthy young stock now being raised.

There were 124,431 animals given State meat inspection in 128 establishments during the month. Of this number, 617 were condemned, 312 of which were because of tuberculosis infection.

Odd Fellows Plan Annual Visit To Old Folks' Home

Members of the Odd Fellows lodges and of the Rebekah lodges of Redwood City and Palo Alto are to follow out their annual custom of visiting the Odd Fellows home at Saratoga on Mother's Day. A large number of members from both lodges with their families and friends will go to the home Sunday and enjoy a picnic at the beautiful grounds, as well as providing a program of entertainment for the old folks.

A large order of flowers, cigars and candy will be taken to the home, so that each inmate will be remembered. The Palo Alto band will play for an out-door concert. Earl Rush and his hay-wire orchestra will have an interesting feature and slight of hand tricks will be shown by George Peterson of Redwood City. Other numbers are being planned.

Sunnyvale Hearing Set For May 14

Choice of Air Base Up To Committee in Congress

Wednesday will be an important day for peninsula communities, as it will mark the opening in Congress of the hearing which will determine whether or not Sunnyvale will be accepted as the site for the navy's new dirigible base. The house naval affairs committee on that day will begin the consideration of a bill introduced by Congressman Arthur M. Free, by which the Sunnyvale site would be selected.

At the same time another bill, introduced by Congressman Swing, and by which the site of Camp Kearny would be chosen for the base, will be considered.

The special naval board appointed to study the respective sites, reported 4 to 1 for the Sunnyvale site. The general board of the navy and also Secretary Adams, favored the southern site.

The decision of the House committee will be the deciding factor in the selection of the site.

Members of General George S. Evans Post, Woman's Relief Corps, will hold their regular monthly card party at the base hospital at Menlo Park on Thursday, May 15. Mrs. Mary Winter is in charge of the arrangements.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1929-30 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright, 1929, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 29

"Never lead away from a king" is a fair rule, generally speaking, but sometimes the rule must be broken. As an example, take the following hands:

Hand No. 1

Hearts — K, 10
Clubs — K, 7, 6
Diamonds — K, 8, 4, 3
Spades — K, 7, 6, 2

	Z

No score, rubber game. If Z dealt, bid three hearts and all passed, what is A's proper opening lead?

In this hand, A has four suits, each of which contains a king, so in this hand, at least, the rule "never lead from a king" must be broken. The question then arises, which of the four suits should A lead? That fact should be determined by the bid of three hearts. If Z has a sound three-heart bid, the chances are that he doesn't hold spades. If he had strength in spades, he should have bid one heart so that if overbid by his partner in spades, he would be in a position to help that bid. For these very good reasons, the proper lead with the foregoing hand is the deuce of spades.

Hand No. 2

Hearts — A, Q, 6, 2
Clubs — K, 9, 4
Diamonds — K, 7, 5, 3
Spades — 7, 6

A		B
	Z

No score, rubber game. If Z dealt, bid one spade and all passed, what is A's proper opening lead?

In this hand, each of the four suits presents good reasons for not leading it. Unfortunately, one suit must be opened, so that one which promises less chance of loss than the others should be selected.

A should not lead hearts for, if he does, it will probably cost him a trick. The trump lead would place his partner in the position of having his trumps led through up to the strong hand, and so probably cause the latter to lose a trick. Those two suits, therefore, should not be led as tricks would unquestionably be lost by so doing.

The problem is then reduced as to which suit, clubs or diamonds, each containing a king, should be opened. When forced to choose the lead between two suits, each containing a king, choose the shorter suit, in this case clubs. The reason for this choice is that a player with only three cards of a suit stands a smaller chance of having the second or third round of his suit trumped than if he had four cards of the suit, and, therefore, a better chance to make his king. In this hand, A's proper opening lead is the four of clubs.

The following "end plays" were given in the preceding article. The solutions that are given should only be read after an attempt has first been made to solve by the reader.

Answer to Problem No. 23

A	Y	B
	Hearts — A, Q Clubs — none Diamonds — 10, 5 Spades — none
Hearts — 6, 5, 2 Clubs — none Diamonds — none Spades — 8		Hearts — K, J Clubs — none Diamonds — K Spades — K
	Z Hearts — 3 Clubs — 5, 4 Diamonds — none Spades — 10

Clubs are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win all of the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Trick one: Z should lead the five of clubs. A's discard is immaterial. Y should discard the five of diamonds, but what can B discard? If he discards a heart, Y's hearts are both good. If he discards the king of diamonds, Y's ten of diamonds is good. If he discards the king of spades, Z's ten of spades is good. Therefore, no matter what card B discards at the first trick, Y Z must win the remaining three tricks. This problem is the simplest kind of end play in which the solution depends entirely on forcing of discards.

Answer to Problem No. 24

A	Y	B
	Hearts — 9 Clubs — none Diamonds — 7, 5 Spades — 8
Hearts — 8 Clubs — none Diamonds — none Spades — K, Q, J		Hearts — none Clubs — 8 Diamonds — K, Q, 9 Spades — none
	Z Hearts — J Clubs — 10 Diamonds — A, J Spades — none

Diamonds are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win three of the four tricks against any defense?

Solution: Trick one*: Z should lead the ten of clubs and trump in Y's hand with the five of diamonds. Trick two: Y should now lead the eight of spades. B can do one of two things (a) trump with the queen or (b) the nine of diamonds. (a) If B should trump with the queen of diamonds, Z should discard the jack of hearts and must then win the next two tricks with the ace jack of diamonds. (b) If B should trump with the nine of diamonds, Z should overtrump with the jack of diamonds and then make the ace. In either way, therefore, Y Z must win three of the four tricks. If Z should overtrump the queen of diamonds at trick two (a), Y Z would only win two tricks. Z would be forced to lead the jack of hearts, B would trump with the nine of diamonds and lead the king, thus winning two tricks. Also note that the lead of the jack of hearts at trick one is a false solution. B would trump and make at least one more trick with the king queen of diamonds. Also note that if Y doesn't trump the club at trick one, A B will win two tricks, as Z will be left in the lead and must lead a heart or a diamond, thus giving opponents two tricks.

Answer to Problem No. 25

A	Y	B
	Hearts — 10, 9 Clubs — none Diamonds — A Spades — A, 6, 3
Hearts — none Clubs — J, 10 Diamonds — 7 Spades — J, 7, 5		Hearts — none Clubs — none Diamonds — K, Q, 8 Spades — Q, 10, 9
	Z Hearts — none Clubs — 9, 7 Diamonds — 10, 9 Spades — K, 2

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win all of the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Trick one*: Z should lead the ten of diamonds, forcing Y in the lead. Trick two*: Y should now lead the ten of hearts. B can safely discard the queen of diamonds, Z the seven of clubs and A the ten of clubs. Trick three*: Y should now lead the nine of hearts. What can B discard? He cannot discard the king of diamonds or Z's nine of diamonds will be good; therefore he is forced to discard the nine of spades. Z should then discard the nine of diamonds; but what can A discard? He cannot discard the jack of clubs or Z's nine of clubs will be good; therefore he must discard the five of spades.

This forcing of both opponents to discard to their disadvantage is the so-called "double squeeze" and a favorite play by the experts. Note carefully that at trick four, Y should lead the trey of spades which Z should win with the king. Trick five: Z should lead the deuce of spades and Y should play the ace.

At trick six, Y's six of spades wins the trick because at trick three both A and B were forced to discard spades to protect their other suits. This end play is as fine an example of the "double squeeze" as can be found because it is simple and forces the discards of both opponents on the same trick. Study it carefully.

Congressman Free Declines Place On London Delegation

Congressman A. M. Free of this district was recently offered the chairmanship of the American delegation to the London Conference on Merchant Marine which is to meet in London on May 20th to discuss international matters concerning the merchant marine, particularly the qestion of a load-line for vessels. This conference will be attended by representatives of nearly every country in the world interested in a merchant marine.

It is indeed an honor to be offered such a commission by the United States government and although Free fully recognized the honor conferred upon him, yet he declined to accept the offer because of matters pending before the Congress, which are of vital interest to California. If Free had accepted the honor it would have been necessary for him to leave the United States in time to be in London by May 20th, but in order to be in Washington to vote upon the tariff stages which is reaching its final stages in the Congress and which contains so many items of vital interest to California, and in order to be present at the hearings before the Naval Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives on the matter of the location of a dirigible base, and to look after other important matters, such as the authorization for the breakwater at Monterey, the authorization for the improvement of Redwood Creek and the survey for San Jose harbor, Free declined the honor. In doing so he said, "I feel my first dulty to my constituents and although I am not unmindful of the honor which is tendered me, I feel it my duty to remain on the job here in Washington until the various matters of interest to my constituents are disposed of."

This Should Correct a Popular Opinion

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

Live Exhibit.

The American Museum of Natural History, a vast and impressive hall of dead things, has one live exhibit—snakes. Everything else is as extinct as the dinosaur exhibit. A few live snakes are no great trouble to a well organized museum, but the Natural History museum has been greatly upset. A garter snake decided to have a family, and brought 24 troublesome children into being. The infants were something like moths; they got into everything. They seeped out of their own enclosures, and some of the best minds of the museum have been sorely taxed in hunting the babies down. They aren't sure that all have been captured yet. Nobody is greatly worried, though, for garter snakes are quite harmless.

The speaker turns, and grins. "I've got to make it tomorrow night," he yells. "Want to hear me?"

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Earth Loses Sun's Heat

Usually we think the earth is kept warm by the sun. But most of the heat given us by the sun dissipates itself during the night, and as half the earth is dark while the sun shines on the other half, there can be no permanent accumulation from the sun. The earth is really kept warm by heat from within it.

Lady—The pint of milk you brought yesterday was sour. What are you going to do about it?

Milkman—Well, I could bring you along a recipe for making cheese.—Passing Show.

Dance and Defy Age, Says Octogenarian

Mill Valley, Calif.—For more than three-quarters of a century Mme. Harriet Foreman Emrick has danced—danced the years away, danced old age away.

For more than half a century she has been teaching others to dance—to dance and stay young.

Today, at eighty, Mme. Emrick is still dancing every day, teaching others to dance, including her two great-grandchildren. She is still youthful, graceful as a wisp of rising smoke—and happy!

For the soldiers of America in three wars, the Civil, Spanish and World wars, Mme. Emrick has danced gratis. It is her one ambition now to dance once again, for the last time in public, before what remains of the Civil war veterans, for the Spanish-American veterans and for the American Legion, all together.

She is a sweet and gracious old lady, this octogenarian, who still teaches the dance to young and old in her Mill Valley studio. She has classes every day and is assisted by her daughter, who was known to the stage as "Clarissa, the Dancer," and by her granddaughter, known as "Georgine." Her two great grandchildren, Harvey and Helen Jean, are her regular pupils.

And lest it be thought that Mme. Emrick teaches only the graceful stately movements of bygone generations, let it be emphasized that she can tap dance with the best of them and toddle a wicked jazz number with any of the sheiks or shebas.

"The dance is a part of the religion of the body," declares Mme. Emrick. "I call myself the priestess of that religion which I originated."

Mme. Emrick has trained scores who have made a mark upon the stage and ballet. She was born in Fort Madison, Iowa, in 1850. She first began to teach the dance more than fifty years ago in Portland, Ore.

Father Sage Says:

The people who always say what they think might take a few lessons from the people who think what they say.

Sam. Overcome in Bath, Saved by Census Taker

New York.—The flame under the water heater in Sam Bianco's room went out while Sam was taking a bath. The room rapidly filled with gas and in a short time Sam lost his senses.

He was awakened when somebody shook him vigorously.

"What's your name?" asked the man who had saved Sam's life.

"Sam Bianco," was the reply.

"Have you a radio?" the rescuer demanded.

The man who had walked into Sam's room just in time to turn off the gas and open the windows was Morton Kotzen, census enumerator.

Volcano-Made Charcoal Warms Alaska People

Kodiak, Alaska.—Charcoal forests left in the wake of the ash storm from the eruption of Mt. Katmai in 1912 yielded an excellent fuel for island residents this winter.

Whole forests were buried in red hot sand and ashes and the wood turned into charcoal. Trees one foot in diameter are completely charred through. Uncovered and broken into small pieces, it is found to be acceptable fuel.

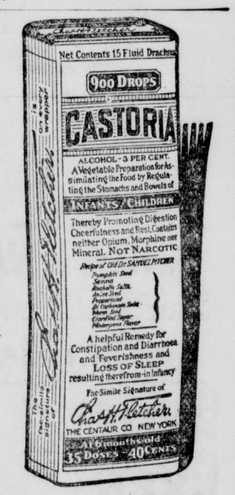
An Ailing CHILD



Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

"Don't you like a strong man?"

"If he has a weakness for you—yes."

When one is insulted, he is never prepared.

A Nonparticipator

"Yes—by staying out!"

He picked something valuable out of everything he read.—Pliny.

Wealth Awaits Long Missing Girl

Seattle.—There's a fairy godmother in Seattle waiting to lavish her love and the good things of this life on Hope Johnston, an orphan, if the right Hope Johnston can be found.

The lucky girl, who should now be about twenty, may learn all about her good fortune by communicating with Louis Abels, insurance broker in the Exeter apartments.

For the "fairy godmother" is none other than Abels wife, Margaret. For years Mrs. Abels has been searching for Hope, whose father, Mrs. Abels' brother, was killed in a mine explosion at Tolt in 1911, and whose mother died of a broken heart shortly after.

Mrs. Abels' long search for her niece was brought to light when Abels visited Justice J. B. Wright for information regarding the Hope Johnston who had been given a suspended sentence of thirty days in his court for purloining a girl friend's party dress.

Thinking the girl might be the one he and his wife had vainly searched for through the years, Abels obtained detailed information about her, which led only to another disappointment, he admitted.

"I am certain she is not the same Hope Johnston," he said, "even though the police have not been able to find her again so that we could see her. The information we have now convinces me we were on the wrong track."

Despite the fact that the girl in question had violated the law, Abels said he and his wife stood ready to give her a good home, had she proved to be "the" Hope Johnston and "if she were not beyond redemption."

Royal Elephant Runs Away to Go Swimming

Delhi.—An elephant from the royal stable took French leave to go swimming in the river. Six elephants and two camels were sent after him. The two camels, holding the elephant's ears in their jaws, and the six truant officers whipping him with their trunks from behind, returned the wayward animal home. He has gone on a hunger strike and refused food for 10 days.

VISITING THE SICK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is a very commendable habit, this visiting the sick, and one which with all our modern equipment and trained nurses to care for those who are not well is not so generally found as it was fifty years ago or so. It is not only commendable; it is in reality one of the human virtues for which heaven is the promised reward. "I was sick, and ye ministered unto me," was an act for which one is to be rewarded with a heavenly inheritance. And yet, some one could do the world a service and possibly make a fortune for himself if he could establish a school for the purpose of teaching the ignorant what is best to do and to say, when visiting the sick, not to speak of what were well not to say or do.

Two young women were calling on Jacobs when I dropped in on him at the hospital not long ago. Jacobs had only recently come from under the knife and must still have had a good many tender spots on his anatomy. The young women were all but sitting on him as he lay in a helpless condition, each one perched unconventionally on the bed, smoking and hovering over him as if he were a curiosity of which they were trying to secure a closer view. Perhaps women must smoke when the urge is on, even if by so doing they bring discomfort to a helpless convalescent, but even the most intimate relationships do not warrant sitting on a friend who is just recovering from a serious operation.

Mrs. Felton has just been calling upon Mrs. Ford, who, poor woman, has been on her back for months and is pretty near the end of her journey. The two women are about the same age, the former husky, vigorous, and proud of the fact that she has never had a sick day in her life. She prolongs her call for an hour or so, when twenty minutes would have been more than adequate, and spends the time in telling how amazingly well she is, how many herculean physical tasks she has recently performed, and how, if nothing unforeseen happens, she seems likely to live to be a hundred. Someway she does not sense the fact that this haunting of her exuberant health in the face of a woman who at best has only a few weeks of life before her, has not helped the invalid the easier to bear her own pains and disappointments.

Mrs. Higgins knows what to do when she comes into a sickroom.

"What a lovely room you have," she says to Mrs. Ford as she enters the sick chamber. "If you must be sick—and really you look better than you did when I was here before—you certainly have a beautiful place to stay in. Everybody's asking about you. Sometimes I think I'd be willing to be sick myself just to find out how many friends I had, and especially if I had as many as you have."

She stays hardly ten minutes but she leaves the sick woman cheered, hopeful, happy in the thought that she may, after all, get well, and if she doesn't she is not going to be forgotten, for she will be leaving behind those who love her.

U. S. Women Swindled of $700,000,000 in 1929

Chicago.—Activities of women financiers were outlined today at the Executive club by Howard E. Reed, a Pittsburgh financier. He stated:

"Eighty-five per cent of all salaries in the country are spent by women. Last year feminine financiers invested $700,000,000 in fraudulent securities. It is the fault of their husbands, brothers, sons and fathers, who do not take time to teach them sound finances.

"They further purchased on the installment plan depreciated luxuries of little value to them and cut down their savings by $150,000,000."

Museum Gets Perfect Crystal Sphere

This picture shows the striking result of the photographer's attempt to secure a picture of the giant sphere. A vigilant museum guard who was watching the proceeding has been picked up by the crystal and is apparently imprisoned upside down in the midst of it.

Bancroft Thrills In Stirring Film

Audiences who go to the Sequoia Theatre expecting to be thrilled will not be disappointed Sunday and Monday for the mighty George Bancroft is there in "Ladies Love Brutes" He rages and thunders with his vigorous voice, he pummels and pounds with his fearsome fists and he laughs and roars with his whole powerful propensity for burly virility.

"Ladies Love Brutes" is the story of a building contractor who has risen from the ranks and who has amassed a fortune. He decides to become a force in the social life of New York so that he may make even greater successes in his role of the "Sky-scraper King." Accordingly he has himself introduced to a beautiful young society matron. He falls in love with her when he learns that she is soon to divorce her erring husband.

But his chances for romance in the "400" are blasted when racketeering enemies devise a plot to wreck him. In the ensuing action there is a terrific fistic encounter in which Bancroft emerges the victor. The conclusion of this stirring tale is a happy one, with Bancroft upheld as more of a hero than ever before.

Mary Astor, one of the younger beauties of the talking films, plays the role of the wealthy society woman. Fredric March performs admirably in the role of the inconsiderate husband who finally is brought to his senses by the heroism of Bancroft.

In the part of Mike Mendino, a gangster, Stanley Fields gives a portrayal that comes close to the work of Bancroft for first honors. Others who aquit themselves with distinction are David Durand and Freddie Burke Frederick, child players who are cast as the respective sons of the hero and the society matron.

Claud Allister, as an English-bred tailor, furnishes an abundance of rare comedy.

"Ladies Love Brutes" is based on a successful stage play, "Pardon My Glove," which was written by Zoe Akins. Waldemar Young and Herman J. Mankiewicz, who adapted the play for the talking screen, made an admirably fast-moving and exciting film production.

Rowland V. Lee, the director, here betters his fine mark made in "Dr. Fu Manchu" and "Wolf of Wall Street."
